Hello Scott, Moumita, Hope & Erika,

Scott – hope you had a fantastic vacation and welcome back!

As you are most likely aware, on Friday, October 21st, Eastern Gateway was granted a preliminary injunction against the U.S. Department of Education's cease-and-desist action which prohibited new students from enrolling in the program and left current students unclear as to whether they could maintain their enrollment at EGCC under the Free College Benefit.

With this ruling, EGCC indicated they planned to open spring registration for students on Tuesday, October 25th.

You can read the full press release here if you have not already done so: <https://egcc.edu/press-release/>

While this ruling provides a temporary path forward, it is a ruling on due process and not the program itself, which remains under review by the DOE. In the short-term, this means at least currently enrolled students will be able to enroll at EGCC under the Free College Benefit for the Spring term. However, it is still uncertain if students will be able to maintain their enrollment at EGCC under the Free College Benefit beyond the spring term.

As part of this ruling and response, SRC is in the process of updating all active SRC hosted Microsites and subdomains with the following verbiage and adding the disclaimer to all our written and verbal communications with students:

- EGCC spring 2023 enrollment is currently open.
 - Students interested in enrolling at EGCC should work with EGCC to determine their enrollment options and be sure they fully understand potential their future enrollment status and financial liability. EGCC is responsible for determining whether the Free College Benefit program is Title IV compliant.

Please let me know if you have any questions or concerns regarding these updates.

I will be sending a separate email to schedule time to get the latest update from you on the [REDACTED] partner vetting process and hopefully go to over the specific details for the spring pilot program shortly.

Looking forward to working together on this exciting initiative.

Many Thanks,
